SOURCE_CHARACTERISTICS:

A. DESCRIPTION_OF_SPACECRAFT:
The International Sun-Earth Explorer (ISEE) Program consisted of three satellites intended to study the Earth's magnetosphere and the solar wind. ISEE-1 and ISEE-2 were launched on October 22, 1977 into highly elliptical geocentric orbits . The satellites passed through the magnetosphere and into the magnetosheath during each orbit. The instruments onboard included an electric field antenna and a fluxgate magnetometer.

B. ORBIT_INFORMATION:
The ISEE-1 satellite was launched into an orbit with an apogee of 23.2 earth radii, an inclination of 28.8 degrees, and a period of 57 hours. The satellite spun about an axis perpendicular to the ecliptic plane at about 19.7 revolutions per minute. Re-entry occurred on September 26, 1987.

C. PERFORMANCE:
This experiment showed no anomalies in the main body package during its lifetime. One of the two analogue preamplifiers suffered an anomaly in mid 1984 which impacted the performance of the experiment in low density plasma regions. During the period of archived data, 1977 - 1983, this was not a problem. The experiment shared long antennas with an AC wave experiment (U. of Iowa) and a r. f. sounder (U. of Paris, Harvey). The impact of this sharing of the antennas with the r. f. sounder is discussed further in the section on data set quality.

INVESTIGATION_OBJECTIVES:
A primary objective of the International Sun-Earth Explorer program was the comparison of measurements of the magnetosphere taken by ISEE-1 and ISEE-2 in an attempt to resolve the space-time ambiguity that arises when measurements are made by only one spacecraft on a thin, moving boundary. Mechanisms for the
